$179,707.50 PAID OVER FOR PRISON FARMS

Land Owners This Week Receive Checks after Many Delays.

WARDEN FRANCIES HERE

Arrives to Establish Headquarters—Plans Indefinite but Reasonably Certain One Building Will be Erected During Summer.

After all, a man did get off the train in Bellefonte and there was a little satchel, and in the satchel there was a cool $179,707.50. It is true that both the man and the satchel were not here as soon as many persons had hoped, but both arrived on Monday. The man was in a day coach and the satchel was in "the baggage car ahead."

The man was C. O. Dunlap, representing the Potter Abstract Company, of Pittsburg. The $179,707.50 in the satchel was the money with which to pay the several owners of farms for the site for the proposed State prison. Mr. Dunlap didn't carry the satchel, having entrusted that worry to the Adams Express Company. Harry Taylor, the agent here, had possession of the fortune for a few minutes, but he was wealthy for a few minutes, only. The first thing Mr. Dunlap did was to bolt for the Express Company office, identity himself and carry away the satchel.

The $179,707.50 in the satchel was in the shape of seventeen checks. The largest check was that for Colonel W. Fred Reynolds. It was for $125,349.50. The smallest check was for $125, this one going to John Angstadt. All of the checks were not turned over at once, as one might naturally expect. There were numerous little hitches to be straightened out. Virtually all of these have been adjusted and before the end of the week the last of the seventeen checks will have been turned over.

Warden Francies arrived in Bellefonte yesterday to establish headquarters. He stated that he expects to spend the greater part of his time here from now on. While plans for building are naturally indefinite at this time, it may be stated as reasonably certain that at least one building will be erected on the prison site during the summer.

The several checks brought to Bellefonte by Mr. Dunlap, the respective amounts, names of land owners and the number of acres in each instance, follow:

Name	Acres	Amount
W. F. Reynolds	2145	$125,349.50
H. E. Zimmerman	275	12,500.00
I. J. Dreese	242	12,100.00
John Houser	252	8,820.00
W. E. Crust	122	7,930.00
E. H. Grove	100	5,000.00
G. P. Thomas	128	2,368.00
Wm. Bilger	140	1,050.00
H. C. Noll	6	1,000.00
S. H. Hoy	100	800.00
Henry Houser	64	640.00
Anthony W. Garver	12	500.00
J. A. Hoover	10	500.00
D. C. Callahan		400.00
Charles T. Bilger	50	375.00
Daniel Callahan	5	250.00
John Angstadt	2½	125.00
Total	3653½	$179,707.50

G. A. R. at M. E. Church.

Gregg Post, No. 95, will attend patriotic services at the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday morning, next. All veterans are cordially invited to join the Post. Assemble at Post Room at 10 o'clock.

W. H. TAYLOR, Commander.

Heads Sons of Veterans.

Thirty-second annual encampment of the Sons of Veterans in session last week at Reading, chose Gettysburg for the 1913 encampment. Francis Callahan, of Philadelphia, was elected division commander over Dallas Dillinger, of Allentown.

Put Out Your Flags.

All residents of Bellefonte are urgently requested to put out their flags at their respective homes on the Fourth of July. If all who have flags will decorate their homes the town will present a not only pretty but patriotic appearance.

Not Over Local Sealers.

Attorney General Bell has informed James Sweeney, chief of the State Bureau of Standards, that he has no authority to supervise sealers of weights and measures who may be appointed by county commissioners or mayors, but only to standardize weights and measures. This opinion was called forth by repeated requests to the chief of the bureau for advice and information of sealers who put their questions and problems up to the State official.

SUSPECTS RELEASED

Two Colored Men Held on Assault Charge Were Discharged.

Ben Anderson and Willie Lovett, the two colored men connected with the Frank A. Robbins circus, who were arrested at Wellsboro, on suspicion of having been the parties who assaulted Emma Brown, the 17-years-old girl, below the show grounds, were given a formal hearing before Alderman John P. Anthony last Saturday, and as no evidence waa adduced against the men, they were discharged from custody, says the Lock Haven Democrat. Frank Griffin, the white man, who was also connected with the show, and was said to have been at the scene of the assault and who was arrested at Avis, after having missed the show train when it left here Sunday morning, was discharged at the same time.

The Brown girl and her companion, on the evening in question, Mrs. George Keeler, of Bellefonte, were sworn and related the facts in the case, as already published. Each of the girls was asked by District Attorney Hall to again look at the two prisoners and state whether they were the parties who committed the assault, and each girl, after a moment's gaze at the two men, stated that in their opinion they were not the parties. The district attorney then asked the alderman to discharge the men, who immediately left with the intention of taking the first train out to rejoin the circus, as the management had sent them funds to pay their carfare to get back to the show.

CENTRE COUNTY PICNIC

Memories of Old Home Revived at Annual Reunion.

Natives of Centre county revived memories of the old homesteads among the hills, at the ninth annual reunion and old-fashioned picnic of the Centre County Association of Philadelphia, held last Saturday afternoon at Belmont Mansion, Fairmount Park. Heavily-laden with baskets containing choice viands and delicacies of the season, 200 members of the association and their friends gathered at 2 o'clock. The dinner was spread under the trees in true picnic style, and good old-fashioned edibles from Centre county were served in profusion.

The officers of the association are: President, Roland G. Curtin; vice president, Ira D. Garman; secretary, J. C. C. Beale; treasurer, S. Gray Mattern.

Special Notice.

It is customary to issue no paper from "The Republican" office during the week of the Fourth of July. It had been our intention to follow this custom and issue no paper next week. It so happens that several legal notices in our columns must be published next week, and in consequence we will issue an edition on Thursday, July 4th, and postpone our little vacation until the following week. There will be no issue of "The Republican" on Thursday, July 11th.

Grocers Not Arrested.

For several days past it has been rumored over the county that four or five Bellefonte grocerymen had been arrested charged with giving short weight in sales. To the best of our knowledge, and according to the statements of the grocerymen in question, the rumor is entirely without foundation. In justice to those directly concerned the rumor is in this manner emphatically denied.

Notice to Subscribers.

With this issue of "The Republican" corrections have been made on labels where payments have made on subscriptions. Examine your label to ascertain whether proper correction has been made in your case. Kindly advise this office if any error should appear. If you have neglected to pay your subscription you will oblige us by attending to it today.

Locates at Howard.

Fred T. Bard, of Philipsburg, for some time past engaged with the Williamsgrove Brick Company at Bigler, has been selected as superintendent of the Howard brick plant, which recently resumed operations.

Teachers at State College.

Several hundred public school teachers from Centre and other counties in the State on Monday went to State College, where they will attend a six weeks' session of summer school. The several Bellefonte teachers are among the number.

Quarterly Meeting.

The last quarterly meeting of this conference year of the Free Methodist church will be held in the Forge church, July 5-7, 1912. The public cordially invited. A. J. Hill, D. E. Samuel Stimer, Pastor.

REV. DR. PLATTS DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Former Bellefonte Pastor Expired at Wilkinsburg Sunday.

ILL BUT ONE WEEK

Death Followed Cold Which Developed Into Pneumonia—Was Successful in Ministry and Well and Favorably Known in Bellefonte.

Profound sorrow was expressed in Bellefonte upon the receipt of news of the death early Sunday afternoon of Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts, until recently pastor of the Bellefonte Presbyterian church. The death of Dr. Platts occurred at his late home in Wilkinsburg and followed an illness of about one week from pneumonia.

During the latter part of last week it became known here that Dr. Platts was critically ill. One of his daughters, who had been visiting in Bellefonte and later with friends in Centre Hall, was summoned home on Saturday. On Saturday evening it was reported here that Dr. Platts had died at 4 o'clock that afternoon. Telrgrams of inquiry brought the reply that he was still living, that his condition was exceedingly grave and that Sunday would bring a crisis. The attending physicians believed that if he could live over Sunday night his recovery might follow. He gradually became weaker, however, and shortly after one o'clock Sunday afternoon he passed away, surrounded by the several members of his grief-stricken family.

Dr. Platts was aged 45 years, was pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg, and one of the best known pastors of that denomination. He was born in New Market, N. J., and was educated in Alfred University, New York. He entered the Baptist ministry, serving for seven years, and left to enter the ranks of the Presbyterian clergy. He was pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church of the North Side, Pittsburg, for some time, and also was associated with Y. M. C. A. work in East Liverpool, O., for a year. Dr. Platts was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Bellefonte, for a time, going to the Wilkinsburg charge in December, 1910. He leaves a widow and six children: Miss Elizabeth, aged 18; Edmund, aged 15; Miss Dorothy, aged 13; Miss Mabel, aged 11; Louis, aged 9, and Allison, aged 6. Dr. Platts was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Had Hand Severed.

Jonas Stine, of Matternville, met with a painful and most unfortunate accident last Friday while at work on the Huyett-McNitt lumber operation at Waddle. While he was at work a log suddenly tilted and pushed him onto the rapidly revolving circular saw. His right hand was so badly mutilated that it was found necessary to amputate the hand at the wrist. The operation was performed at the Bellefonte hospital. Mr. Stine is one of Matternville's best citizens. He was regularly employed at Scotia until the ore mines and washer were shut down some months ago. Since that time he has been working for the Huyett-McNitt Lumber Company, planning to go back to his old position when things opened up again at Scotia. His many friends deeply sympathize with him in his misfortune and trust that he will speedily recover.

Had An Eye Removed.

The venerable John McGovern, Sr., met with an accident last week that resulted in the loss of one of his eyes. While trimming some rose bushes at the Warfield home, on North Allegheny Street, a tiny thorn became lodged in his eye. He thought nothing of the incident at the time. Several days later his eye became inflamed and when a physician was called he at once directed that Mr. McGovern consult a specialist. When taken to the Williamsport hospital Mr. McGovern was informed that it would be necessary to remove the one eye in order to save the other. An operation was quickly performed, the injured eye being removed.

Killed on Railroad.

John M. Hall, a former resident of Philipsburg, was killed in a railroad accident on the Buffalo & Allegheny Valley railroad last Friday. He was a freight conductor. Surviving are a widow and five children.

Resume at Sandy Ridge.

The Sandy Ridge fire brick plant, some time ago destroyed by fire and rebuilt on a more extensive and modern scale, will resume operations on July 1st.

DOG, REVOLVER, HEARING: EDWARD EVERS FINED

Admitted Firing Shot Over Thomas Barner's Shoulder.

DIDN'T TRY TO HIT HIM

Trouble Started When Prosecutor's Dog Bit Defendant's Son—Squire Refrained from Imposing Jail Sentence Because of War Days.

On information made by Thomas Barner, Edward Evers was last week arrested and given a hearing before Squire W. H. Musser, in Bellefonte, the result of which was a sentence to pay a $5 fine and costs of the proceeding. The fact that the defendant's father, the venerable Thomas Evers, and Squire Musser were members of the same regiment during the Civil war had a good deal to do in softening the sentence and thereby avoiding a brief term in jail.

The trouble arose when a dog owned by Barner bit a young son of the defendant. The child's father started out to shoot the dog. When Barner demurred Evers was ready to whip the dog's owner. Considering this a challenge, Barner squared off. Evers whipped out his revolver and after snapping it several times the trigger worked and a bullet went whizzing over Barner's shoulder. The arrest and hearing followed. Evers denied shooting with intent to hit Barner. His purpose, he explained at the hearing, was merely to frighten him. Squire Musser, in addition to imposing a fine and costs on Evers bound him over to keep the peace for one year, especially in regard to Barner. The latter said that he had killed the dog which caused the trouble. Both Evers and Barner reside near Hublersburg.

An Early Morning Wedding.

Keeping their plans a deep secret, Miss Anna Laird and James Wilson, both of Port Matilda, slipped away early Monday morning and unknown to the former's parents were married at the United Brethren parsonage by Rev. H. A. McKelvey. The parents of the young couple are neighbors in Port Matilda. When the brides's father started out to work Monday morning he was unconscious of the fact that a wedding was on the program. Miss Laird and Mr. Wilson walked about one mile to the Black Oak church, where by appointment they met Wilbur Woodring in his automobile, and proceeded to the home of Mr. McKelvey. Immediately following the wedding ceremony Mr. Woodring took them in his car to Hannah station, where the young couple boarded a train for their honeymoon trip. The bride is a daughter of Abednego Laird and is an estimable young lady. The groom is a son of Wesley Wilson.

Sunday School Convention.

The fourth annual convention of the Sunday School Association of District Eight will be held in the Waddle church on Wednesday, July 3rd, at 2 o'clock and 8 o'clock, P. M. An interesting program has been prepared. Addresses will be delivered by Rev. G. E. Smyth, Rev. Marion J. Runyan, Rev. J. McK. Reiley, James V. Thompson and W. J. Campbell. There will be readings, recitations and musical numbers by Miss Mabel Norris, Mrs. Marion J. Runyan, Miss Margaretta Way and Miss Verna Way.

Married at Spring Mills.

Emerson E. Weiser, of 1504 Eighth avenue, Altoona, and Miss Jennie K. Decker, of Spring Mills, were married at the home of the bride's brother, Leonard Decker, at Spring Mills, last Monday evening, by the Rev. Max Lantz, of the Methodist Episcopal church. After a trip to Mifflinburg, the couple will live in Altoona.

HOUSER REUNION

Clan Hold Delightful Day's Outing in Woods at Peru Station.

The Houser reunion held at Peru station last Saturday was an occasion long to be remembered by those who were privileged to be present and participate in the festivities of the day.

At an early hour in the morning members of the family connection began to arrive and by ten o'clock a large delegation of representatives of this numerous family were on the ground, greeting one another with friendly salutations.

The forenoon was spent in renewing acquaintances and in social converse until the noon hour, when all present were gathered around a table loaded with the best things that could be provided.

After dinner the assemblage, numbering between two and three hundred, gathered around the speaker's stand, when a formal organization was effected and the minutes of last year's reunion were read and approved. Daniel Houser the president of the association then introduced Clement Dale, Esq., of Bellefonte, who spoke for a half hour or more, giving an account of the first settlement of the Housers in the locality which is now known as Houserville. The speaker gave an interesting history of the Houser family, beginning with Jacob Houser, who first came to this section of the country about the year 1788 and from whom has decended one of the most numerous and enterprising families now living in the Central part of the state. Mr. Dale also spoke of the early settlers along Spring Creek, who were the associates and neighbors of Jacob Houser and by their combined efforts cut down forests, cleared farms and who by their industry made the valley what is is today—one of the most productive to be found in the commonwealth. Mr. Dale also gave many entertaining and amusing incidents of what occured among the early settlers as handed down by tradition. On the whole the address was very well received and brought forth hearty approval, as was manifested by a united vote of thanks at its conclusion.

The association was entertained by a pleasing duet sung by Russie Cole and Marian Waite, two young ladies from Colewille. These young people also rendered several delightful recitations which were repeatedly applauded. Mrs. Guisewite rendered a most interesting recitation, delivered in a deliberate and impressive manner.

The meeting then adjourned, all persons present voting it to have been one of the most interesting and enjoyable ever held and with a resolution that all unite in making next year's entertainment equally as good, if not better.

YEARICK—HOY REUNION

Well Known Families and Friends Enjoy Annual Outing in Woods.

The annual reunion of the Yearick—Hoy families was held at Hecla Park on Thursday of last week, and as was to be expected proved a pleasing success. Upward of 200 of the relatives and friends were in attendance and all had a most enjoyable time. Letters were received from friends in Michigan and Ohio, extending greetings and expressing regret upon their inability to be present. Owing to his advanced age, Adam R. Yearick relinquished the presidency of the association. Rev. Z. A. Yearick was chosen for the vacancy.

During the morning the Executive Committee held the usual business meeting. The committee consisted of Adam R. Yearick, of Lamar, president; N. H. Yearick, of Jacksonville, vice president; J. H. Wetzel, of Bellefonte, secretary; Albert H. Spayd, of Hublersburg, treasurer; Rev. Z. A. Yearick, of Shenandoah, Pa., historian for the Yearicks, and John S. Hoy, of Spring Mills, historian for the Hoys, also the following: John Hoy, Jr., of Hublersburg; Benjamin Royer and S. R. Gettig, of Madisonburg; Samuel C. Hoy, of Zion; Allison Rishel, of Clintondale; D. K. Miller and Henry Yearick, of Lock Haven; John C. Hoy, of Jacksonville; William Yearick, of Mill Hall; Amos Garbrick and D. K. Woodring, of Bellefonte.

At noon an old-fashioned dinner was served and following that exercises were held in the auditorium. Rev. W. E. Harr, of Lock Haven offered prayer, following which splendid addresses were delivered by Rev. M. J. Snyder, of the United Evangelical church, and Rev. E. F. Faust, of the Reformed church, both of Howard. There were impromptu remarks by quite a number of persons. Excellent music was rendered by Mrs. Henry Hoy, of Hublersburg, who presided at the piano.

A feature at next year's reunion will be music by a brass band, this being decided upon at the close of the exercises last week.

BRYAN GETS JOLT AT BALTIMORE CONVENTION

Defeated by Judge Parker for Temporary Chairmanship.

CLARK'S BOOM GROWS

Speaker's Chances for Nomination for President Helped by Failure of Bryan to Control Convention—Palmer Supplants Guffey.

With 67 of Pennsylvania's 76 delegates supporting him, William Jennings Bryan went down to defeat for temporary chairman in the Democratic national convention, at Baltimore, on Tuesday. Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, choice of the conservative element, was elected over Bryan by a vote of 579 to 510. The result of the temporary chairmanship battle was generally accepted as removing any hope Bryan might have had of stampeding the convention to him for a fourth nomination for President.

Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, contributed his full strength to Bryan, believing that the Nebraskan would win and thereby improve his (Wilson's) chances for the presidential nomination. Many of Wilson's friends fear that he has seriously endangered any chance he may have had for becoming the party's nominee. Charles R. Kurtz, of Bellefonte, a delegate-at-large, voted with those opposing Parker.

Bryan was the central figure of the opening session of the convention. He first refused to compromise on the temporary chairmanship. When he saw defeat ahead he wanted to deal with his opponents, but they in turn refused. Bryan then went into the convention and by power as an orator attempted to sway the crowd as he had done so many times in the last eighteen years. It was a losing battle for Bryan from the very beginning, and the three-times nominee for President was voted down when the roll was finally called.

Many of the followers of Speaker Champ Clark swung into line for Parker, and because of Parker's [illegible] Bryan observers at Baltimore are inclined to believe that Clark's chances for the presidential nomination have been materially improved. His nomination is confidently predicted by his managers. In the Democratic convention a two-thirds vote is necessary to nominate, and because of this fact it is conceded that the winner must receive some support, at least, from Bryan. The nomination will likely be made today or tonight.

On Monday the Pennsylvania delegation formally elected Congressman A. M. Palmer, of Stroudsburg, to succeed Colonel Guffey in the Democratic National Committee. Guffey, fighting his home State enemies to the last, voted in the National Committee in favor of recommending Parker for temporary chairman of the convention. The delegation held a caucus and indorsed Bryan for temporary chairman and sent a committee to request Guffey to so record his vote. A note setting forth this request was sent in to Guffey while the National Committee was in session. He calmly tucked it into his pocket and proceeded to cast his vote for Parker.

Donelly and Ryan, the Philadelphia leaders who have trained with Guffey for many years, broke away from the old Pittsburg chieftain and delivered 10 of 12 Philadelphia delegates to Bryan in the convention. This was a surprise to those who recalled Bryan's steam roller methods in ousting the Philadelphians at Denver four years ago.

Tetanus Anti-Taxin Station.

Green's drug store has been designated the distributing station for Centre County for tetanus anti-toxin in case of Fourth of July accidents. Announcement to this effect was this week made by the State Health Department at Harrisburg. The announcement says:

"The anti-toxin will be furnished without cost to the poor. It is essential that the tetanus anti-toxin be administered within 24 to 48 hours after the wound has been inflicted.

"Any physician can secure an immunizing dose of 1500 units free upon applying to a distributing station, on certifying that it is for the treatment of a person too poor to pay.

Robert S. Murphy Dead.

Ex-Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Murphy died suddenly in Philadelphia on Monday. He recently removed to that city from Johnstown to practice law. He was 51 years old, was Lieutenant Governor under Governor Stuart and a brilliant orator. He was a son of the late Francis Murphy, the noted temperance advocate.

Taft and Sherman Renominated--Roosevelt Bolts.

Turbulent Scenes Mark Close of Convention at Chicago.

TAFT ON FIRST BALLOT

Majority of Roosevelt Delegates Refrained from Voting—62 Pennsylvanians Join in Bolt—Missouri and Illinois Refrused.

Concluding its turbulent five-days session, the Republican National convention at Chicago on Saturday night renominated not only President Taft but also Vice-President Sherman. The vote on the nomination for President was:

Taft	561
Roosevelt	107
LaFollette	41
Cummins	17
Hughes	2
Not voting	344
Absent	6

Before the vote was taken Colonel Roosevelt sent to the convention a statement asking that his name be not presented for the nomination. As many of the Roosevelt delegates as would obey the Colonel's wishes refrained from voting for President and also the platform. These delegates for the most part remained in the convention, merely refusing to vote. Following the regular convention the Roosevelt delegates and the Colonel himself held a meeting in another hall and founded the Progressive Party. At this meeting Roosevelt was nominated for President. He declared his willingness to accept. He told his friends to return to their home districts and sound public sentiment and if they then were still desirous of having him stand as a candidate to hold another meeting at a later date and formally nominate him. Roosevelt's plan is to have his Progressive Party take in both Republicans and Democrats.

The Roosevelt bolt was decided upon when the convention sustained the action of the Credentials Committee which in turn ratified the decisions of the National Committee in seating Taft delegates whose seats had been contested. The seating of these 68 or 70 delegates insured a majority for Taft for President, and likewise Roosevelt's defeat. Including these delegates in question President Taft had but 21 more than the 540 votes necessary to nominate. Nearly all of the Illinois delegates and all of those from Missouri and Idaho refused to bolt with Roosevelt. Virtually solid delegations from Pennsylvania, California, Kansas, Maine, Nebraska, Minnesota, New Jersey, South Dakota and West Virginia went with Roosevelt into the Progressive Party [illegible]

Of Pennsylvania's delegation of 76, 62 followed Roosevelt's wishes by not voting while 2 voted for him, 9 voted for Taft, and 2 voted for Hughes. Ex-Senator Flinn headed the Pennsylvanians who bolted with Roosevelt. Prior to this, and rather foreshadowing the bolt, Flinn formally resigned his election to succeed Penrose in the National Committee, and Republican State Chairman Wasson was at once elected to fill the vacancy. Delegates Mayo and Boose, from the Twenty-first Congressional district, of which Centre Connty is a part, were among those to refrain from voting in the regular Convention and later participated in the Progressive Party meeting which nominated Roosevelt.

But one roll call was necessary to nominate Taft, for whom a seconding speech was made by John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia merchant.

Fertile Soil and Marvelous Crops.

"All the truth in the universe is of no value to us until we begin to let it create facts." There was never a greater truth uttered. This is realistic in Palm City Farm, Palm Beach County Florida, where men are utilizing the fertile soil and making the truth of value by tilling the ground to bring forth a wealth of harvest which the balmy air, jeweled raindrops and golden sunshine force to maturity during winter months and which crops of vegetables bring best prices at a time when it is impossible to grow them anywhere else in the United States, outside of Florida. Twenty acres of peppers, egg plan or tomatoes yield ($12,000.00), twelve thousand dollars, inside of four months from planting, and in many instances much more.

The land sells for only $50.00 per acre, in ten acre tracts, $10.00 down and $10.00 per month until paid for. No interest. Taxes are paid until 1915. A free town lot in Palm City on the beautiful St. Lucie River is given to each purchaser. If you want the opportunity of your life, see Mr. George P. Bell, our salesman who has been on the ground, and is in Bellefonte now at the Garman House. A postal will bring him to you. F. B. Brantly, General Agent, No. 8 Stevens Block, Tyrone, Pa.

Was Grandson of Casper Peters.

Lewis P. Peters, grandson of Casper Peters, forefather of the Peters family in America, died at Allentown, last Saturday, of apoplexy, at the age of 76. He was a lifelong business man and a founder of the Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Zeigler Family Reunion.

The annual Zeigler family reunion was held in Grange Park, Centre Hall, on Saturday, June 22.

THE PLATFORM

Planks on Tariff and Imprisonment for Violations of Anti-Trust Laws.

Leading planks in the platform adopted by the Republican national convention are devoted to the tariff and imprisonment for violations of anti-trust laws. These planks follow:

"We reaffirm our belief in a protective tariff. The Republican tariff policy has been of the greatest benefit to the country, developing our resources, diversifying our industries and protecting our workmen against competition with cheaper labor abroad, thus establishing for our wage-earners the American standard of living. The protective tariff is so woven into the fabric of our industrial and agricultural life that to substitute for it a tariff for revenue only would destroy many industries and throw millions of our people out of employment. The products of the farm and of the mine should receive the same measure of protection as other products of American labor.

"We hold that the import duties should be high enough while yielding a sufficient revenue to protect adequately American industries and wages. Some of the existing import duties are too high, and should be reduced. Readjustment should be made from time to time to conform to changing conditions and to reduce excessive rates, but without injury to any American industry. To accomplish this, correct information can best be obtained by an expert commission, as the large volume of useful facts contained in the recent reports of the Tariff Board has demonstrated.

"The pronounced feature of modern industrial life is its enormous diversification. To apply tariff rates justly to these changing conditions requires closer study and more scientific methods than ever before. The Republican party has shown by its creation of a Tariff Board its recognition of this situation, and its determination to be equal to it. We condemn the Democratic party for its failure either to provide funds for the continuance of this board or to make some other provision for securing the information requisite for intelligent tariff legislation. We protest against the Democratic method of legislating on this vitally important subject without careful investigation.

"We condemn the Democratic tariff bills passed by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-second Congress as sectional, as injurious to the public credit and as destructive of business enterprise.

"That the Courts, both Federal and State, may bear the heavy burden laid upon them to the complete satisfaction of public opinion, we favor legislation to prevent long delays and the tedious and costly appeals which have so often amounted to a denial of justice in civil cases and to a failure to protect the public at large in criminal cases.

"Since the responsibility of the judiciary is so great, the standards of judicial action must be always and everywhere above suspicion and reproach. While we regard the recall of Judges as unnecessary and unwise, we favor such action as may be necessary to simplify the process by which any Judge who is found to be derelict in his duty may be removed from office.

"Together with peaceful and orderly development at the home, the Republican party earnestly favors all measures for the establishment and protection of the peace of the world and for the development o closer relations between the various nations of the earth. It believes most earnestly in the peaceful settlement of international disputes and in the reference of all justifiable controversies between nations to an international Court of Justice.

"The Republican party is opposed to special privilege and to monopoly. It placed upon the statute book the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887, and the important amendments thereto, and the Anti-Trust Act of 1890, and it has consistently and successfully enforced the provisions of these laws. It will take no backward step to permit the re-establishment in any degree of conditions which were intolerable.

"Experience makes it plain that the business of the country may be carried on without fear or without disturbance, and at the same time without resort to practices which are abhorrent to the common sense of justice. The Republican party favors the enactment of legislation supplementary to the existing Anti-Trust Act which will define as criminal offenses those specific acts that uniformly mark attempts to restrain and to monopolize trade, to the end that those who honestly intend to obey the law may have a guide for their action and that those who aim to violate the law may the more surely be punished. The same certainty should be given to the law prohibiting combinations and monopolies that characterizes other provision of commercial law, in order that no part of the field of business opportunity may be restricted by monopoly or combination, that business success honorably achieved may not be converted into crime, and that the right of every man to acquire commodities, and particularly the necessaries of life, in an open market, uninfluenced by the manipulation of Trust or combination, may be preserved."

PROGRESSIVE PARTY

Roosevelt Addresses Meeting Which Nominated Him as Independant.

The meeting which founded the Progressive Party was held immediately following the regular convention, but in another hall. Roosevelt was promptly nominated for President, and accepting he said, addressing his followers:

"I thank you for your nomination, and in you I recognize the lawfully-elected delegates to the Republican convention who represent the overwhelming majority of the voters who took part in the Republican primaries prior to the convention, and who represent the wish of the majority of the lawfully-elected members of the convention. I accept the nomination, subject to but one convention.

"This has now become a contest which cannot be settled merely along the old party lines. The principles that are at stake are as broad and as deep as the foundation of our democracy itself. They are in no sense sectional. They should appeal to all honest citizens, East and West, North and South; they should appeal to all right thinking men, whether Republicans or Democrats, without regard to their previous party affiliations. I feel that the time has come when not only all men who believe in progressive principles, but all men who believe in those elementary maxims of public and private morality which must underlie every form of successful free government should join in one movement. Therefore, I ask you to go to your several homes to find out the sentiment of the people at home, and then again to come together, I suggest by mass-convention, to nominate for the Presidency a progressive candidate on a progressive platform, a candidate and a platform that will enable us to appeal to Northerner and Southerner, Easterner and Westerner, Republican and Democrat alike, in the name of our common American citizenship. If you wish me to make the fight I will make it even if only one State should support me. The only condition I impose is that you shall feel entirely free when you come together to substitute any other man in my place if you deem it better for the movement, and in such case I will give him my heartiest support.

"Wherever in any State the Republican party is true to the principles of the founders, and is genuinely the party of justice and of progress I expect to see it come bodily into the new movement, for the convention that has just set in this city is in no proper sense of the word a Republican convention at all. It does not represent the masses of the Republican party. It was organized in cynical defiance of their wishes, and it has served the purpose only of a group of sinister political bosses who have not one shadow of sympathy with the spirit and purpose of the Republican party of 50 years ago, and many of whom have used the party merely as an adjunct to money-making, either for themselves or for the great crooked financial interests which they serve.

"The bosses who first stole enough delegates to enable them to dominate this convention and then did their will in it have no kinship of soul or spirit with the men who started the Republican party on its career as an agent of liberty and justice. Imagine for yourselves how Messrs. Barnes and Pehrose and Guggenheim would have looked standing under the historic oaks in that Michigan city where the Republican party was born 56 years ago! You, my friends, who are here before me, you are the heirs in the spirit of Abraham Lincoln when he refused longer to be bound by the shackles of the past and faced the new issues in the new spirit that the times demanded. But we are more fortunate in one respect than our predecessors, for we who now stand for the progressive cause, the progressive movement, have done forever with all sectionalism, and we make our appeal equally to the sons of the men who fought under Grant and to the sons of the men who fought under Lee, for the cause we champion is as emphatically the cause of the South as it is the cause of the North.

"I am in this fight for certain principles, and the first and most important of these goes back to Sinai, and is embodied in the Commandment. 'Thou shalt not steal,' Thou shalt not steal a nomination. Thou shalt neither steal in politics nor in business. Thou shalt not steal from the people the birthright of the people to rule themselves. I hold, in the language of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, that 'stealing is stealing. No people is wholly civilized where a distinction is drawn between stealing an office and stealing a purse. No truly honest man should be satisfied with an office to which his title is not as valid as that of the homestead which shelters his family.'

"We practically apply the commandment 'Thou shalt not steal,' and we wish to give a square deal to every citizen of this Republic so that he may have a chance to show the stuff there is in him, unhelped by privilege himself and unhampered by privilege for others. I hold that we are performing a high duty in inaugurating this movement, for the permanent success of practices such as have obtained in the fraudulent convention that has just closed its sittings would mean the downfall of this Republic; and we are performing the most patriotic of duties when we set our faces like flint against such wrong."

ONCE HAD CONVENTION

In 1839 Whigs Nominated W. H. Harrison for President at Harrisburg.

Chicago's recent nerve-racking condition recalls that Harrisburg was once the chosen city for a National convention.

This was in 1839 when the Whigs nominated William Henry Harrison for President and John Tyler for Vice President.

The convention was held in what is now the Zion Lutheran church building at that time the First Lutheran church and lasted from December 4 to 7.

The vote was counted on February 10, 1841, and Harrison had 231 to 60 for Martin Van Buren, of New York, for President. John Tyler, of Virginia, had 234 votes for Vice President; Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, 48; Litttleton W. Tazwell, of Virginia, 11, and James K. Polk, of Tennessee, 1. Twenty-six states voted.

In the popular vote Harrison had 1,257,017 and Van Buren, 1,128,702. L. G. Birney, of New York, had 7,056. Harrison and Tyler were chosen, but Harrison lived to rule as President but one month, dying in office on April 4, 1841.

Harrisburg has been frequently mentioned as the place for holding national conventions, but it is handicapped in not having a convention hall large enough to accommodate the crowds, and insufficient hotel accommodations.

The name of "Whig" was first taken in England in 1688 by a body that brought about the revolution of that year that placed William III on the throne. In the United States it was assumed by the political party flourishing from 1829 to 1853, that was opposed to the so-called Democrats of that period. Henry Clay was leader of the party for a long time.

Boiler Explosion Exhibited.

While thousands of spectators looked on from surrounding hillsides, a comparative test of locomotive equipped with an ordinary or "radical stay" fire box and a Jacobs Shupert fire box was made at Coatsville last Friday.

The Jacobs Shupert locomotive was tested first, and while it proved interesting to railroad and scientific men it lacked the spectacular finish of the "radical stay" tests.

Steam was raised to 225 pounds in the Jacobs Shupert locomotive, and then the water was permitted to boil and fire kept under it. The boiler went dry without any apparent effect on the locomotive. The test required two hours.

The "radical stay" locomotive got the steam test. When the water got about fourteen inches below the crown sheet there was an explosion. The locomotive was lifted several feet and settled back again, looking about the same. An examination showed that the crown sheet had been ruptured and that the fire box was damaged.

The explosion occurred in less than an hour after the beginning of the test. It is asserted the new invention will make boiler explosions rare.

Baby Head in Bed Trap.

With its tiny head wedged between the bars of an iron bed and the little body relaxed from exhaustion, the tear-stained face showing that the little one had passed through hours of terrible ordeal, two Cincinnati policemen, after breaking in a screen window at the home of Mrs. Ethel Green in that city, found a six-months-old baby in a most dangerous predicament. The attention of the officers was called by neighbors, who allege they heard cries coming from the room all afternoon. After the baby's release it was cared for by neighbors. The mother did not arrive home until some time later, and she was then taken into custody, on the charge of cruelty. The police say she had gone to a summer resort early in the day.

To Halt Big School Gift.

An attempt may be made to break the will of O. S. Johnson, the millionaire Scranton coal operator, who, upon his death, several weeks ago, bequeathed $1,500,000 for the founding of a manual training school in that city. Attorneys have visited nearly all of the heirs, of which there are about two dozen, and pointed out to them the possibility of setting the will aside on a technicality. The point raised is that A. H. Christy, one of the executors under the will, is also one of the beneficiaries, Just what success greeted the lawyers in their efforts is not definitely known; but they are said to be preparing papers in the case. Should the will be broken Scranton will lose its technical school.

Grant's Daughter To Wed.

Announcement has been made in Chicago of the engagement of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, only daughter of former President Ulysses S. Grant, and Frank H. Jones, who was Assistant Postmaster General in President Cleveland's administration and now is secretary of a Chicago bank. The wedding will take place July 4 at Mrs. Sartoris' country place in Cobourg, Ontario, and will be in the presence only of relatives.

Helped to Keep Down Expenses

Mrs. J. E. Henry, Akron, Mich., tells how she did so: "I was bothered with my kidneys and had to go nearly double. I tried a sample of Foley Kidney Pills and they did me so much good that I bought a bottle, and feel that they saved me a big doctor's bill." C. M. Parrish.

People Tell Each Other About Good Things.

Twenty years ago few people in the world knew of such a preparation as a Powder for the Feet. Today after the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease has been told year after year by one gratified person to another, there are millions abroad and in this country who would as soon go without a dentifrice as without the daily use of Allen's Foot-Ease. It is a cleanly, wholesome, healing, antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes which has given rest and comfort to tired and aching feet in all parts of the world. It cures while you walk. Over 30,000 testimonials of cures of smarting, swollen, tender, perspiring feet. It prevents friction and wear of the stockings and will save in your stocking bill ten times its cost each year. Imitations pay the dealer a large profit, otherwise you would never be offered a substitute when you ask for Allen's Foot-Ease, the original antiseptic powder for the feet. It gives a restfulness and a springy feeling that makes you forget you have feet. Allen's Foot-Ease is the greatest comfort discovery of the age and so easy to use It prevents soreness, blisters or puffing. Don't go on your vacation without a package of Allen's Foot-Ease. Sold everywhere, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Sample sent free. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

Will Increase its Stock.

The Bald Eagle Water Company, of Tyrone, has filed notice of increase of stock from $10,000 to $25,000.

Shot Large Bald Eagle.

A real bald eagle measuring six feet from tip to tip of its wings, was shot while sitting on the chimney of the West Chillisquaque township high school at Montandon on Monday of last week by Jerome Furman, says the Lewisburg Journal. Having strayed from its mountain lair in search of prey, it was chased from a number of poultry yards until it took refuge on the school building. When shot it dropped down the air chamber to the basement. Master Donald Hauck crawled through the air chamber and captured the prize. Old residents say that it was the first eagle shot in the immediate vicinity for over fifty years.

Tight Skirt Starts War.

War between the women of Allentown and the Lehigh Valley Transit Company, over the height of the steps of the expensive new pay-as-you-enter cars has been put up to the arbitration of Councils. The women say the steps are too high. The officials of the trolley line retort that the women's skirts are too tight, and declare it would cost thousands to rebuild the cars with lower steps. A committee of gallant Councilmen has nevertheless been named to see what can be done for them in the matter.

Farmers, mechanics, railroaders laborers rely on Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. Takes the sting out of cuts, burns or bruises at once. Pain cannot stay where it is used.

Mrs. C. Johnson, 362 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, for they are the best remedy I ever used for backache and other symptoms of kidney complaint. At one time my back was so lame and painful that I could hardly get around and dizzy spells were common. I was restless at night and my kidneys gave me great annoyance, the kidney secretions being unnatural. On the advice of a member of my family who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with benefit, I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. and they did me so much more good than any other medicine I had previously taken. The kidney secretions became natural and the pains and lameness in my back was removed. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint." (Statement given October 21, 1907.)

PERMANENT RELIEF.

On November 23, 1909, Mrs. Johnson was interviewed and she said: "I still have confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills. They permanently cured me of kidney trouble and I have had no need of a kidney medicine during the past two years. Other members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and in each case benefit have been derived."

Tomatoes Bring $600.00 Per Acre!

Palm Beach County truck growers are getting rich faster than others are anywhere else in the United States. Most of them rest in the summer after having sold their crops of tomatoes, egg-plants, peppers etc, (which they grow during the winter) for $600 to $800 per acre. These are marvelous facts. Palm City Farms, Palm Beach County, Florida, are fertile, 28 feet above sea level and sell for only $50 per acre. $1.00 per acre down and $1.00 per acre per month, no interest. Taxes paid to 1915. A free town lot with a ten acre farm. "Get in on the ground floor" and make money while you can. F. B. Brantly, 8 Stevens Block, Tyrone, Pa.

A BANKRUPT COUNTY

Northumberland Commissioners Confronted With Half-Million Debt.

The Northumberland county commissioners are staring at cold figures that proclaim the county a helpless bankrupt.

Northumberland county is $587,400 in debt. The interest in one year is $22,753.75. Enough is eaten up in five years to build a handsome Court House. The money paid out to keep up the debt would in a few years be sufficient to macadamize every road in the county.

The temporary loans and floating indebtedness amount to $130,000 and the interest on that amount is $7,237.51. The loans have been made by banks throughout the county. No Milton banks have loaned money to the county.

The commonwealth allows the county to borrow, on a valuation of $36,000,000, the sum of $720,000. The limit has been approached within $3,000. The otal sum already borrowed is $717,400.

The commissioners are in a quandary. Where to raise money to run the machinery of government is the urgent problem. The commissioners decided to demand settlement of back tax duplicates from tax collectors, and to press claims on money due the county for some time.

So far as can be learned they did not discuss the raising of money through the proper valuation of coal lands, which were put down to low figures by previous boards after the county had spent a large sum in a fight to have them raised.

88 Balls n 9-Inning Game.

In an article on "How to Win Baseball Games," published in the July American Magazine, Hugh S. Fullerton says:

"It is possible for a pitcher to throw only twenty-seven balls in a nine-inning game. No accurate record of the smallest number of balls thrown in any game exists, as no one counts every ball in every game. I scored one game in which Ed. Walsh pitched only eighty-eight balls, seven of which were fouls, which I regard as remarkable. I saw Coombs pitch seventeen balls to one batter last summer. The greatest number of pitched balls I ever counted in a game was 211, George (Rube) Waddell being the victim, and he weakened in the ninth and allowed five runs—showing that the strain was too great even for a man of his marvelous power and endurance."

They Put an End to it

Charles Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N. Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they gave him prompt relief from a bad case of kidney trouble that had long bothered him. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. C. M. Parrish.

Lawyer Barred from Practice.

For improperly introducing jurymen to defendants at the May term of the Schuylkill county court, Edward Brennan, of McAdoo, a lawyer, has been suspended from the practice of his procession for four months. Upon introducing certain jurors Brennan is said to have declared that they would be "all right" if empaneled in election cases scheduled for trial.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

FOR THE TICKET.

It was the earnest hope of "The Republican," repeatedly expressed, that the Republican national convention would nominate a ticket which would insure a united party at the polls in November. It is our regret that the leading aspirants did not put party success above personal ambition and thus make possible a solid party front in the battle to be waged against the common enemy. As a result of the bitter personal warfare waged at Chicago the situation within the party is, to say the least, deplorable. The brightest star of hope before us at this writing is the prospect of a smash-up at Baltimore which will send the Democrats into the campaign divided among themselves and therefore lacking that unity and that strength which comes only when a party is working harmoniously and unselfishly for success.

It is not for us to criticise any Republican for the part he took at Chicago in advance of the decision of the convention. We hold that until the voice of the majority shall decide all Republicans are entitled to advocate their ideas and uphold their ideals. The convention having spoken, however, the nominees become the standard bearers of the party, and as such they are entitled to the support of all Republicans. We shall earnestly and unselfishly give what support we can to the ticket so nominated, for we accept it as the choice of the majority. Had the convention nominated Colonel Roosevelt we should have esteemed it a pleasure to give him the same measure of support we now tender President Taft.

We deplore the talk of a party bolt, realizing that the reckless and destructive majority in the present House at Washington merely foreshadows what might be expected should both branches of Congress and the White House be turned over to the Democratic party. Business prosperity, which means employment and happiness in the homes of workingmen the country over, demands that Congress and the White House shall be in constructive hands. We do not share the views of those who would commit affairs at Washington for the next four years to men untried in service and policies untried in practice. We believe it better to be on the safe side, and it has time and time again been demonstrated that the Republican side is the safe side.

We do not challenge the right and privilege of any Republican to leave his party when he becomes dissatisfied with some of the acts of those entrusted with party management. We do ask however, that every dissatisfied Republican today pause and consider well whether he will not accomplish most by remaining in the party and with others, equally earnest and sincere, work to build up and strengthen the weak places. Every Republican who leaver his party thereby deprives himself of opportunities to maintain the proud dignity and good name of the party. More than this, he actually strengthens the hands of those among the party managers who are guided by selfish motives only. There are, after all, few things we undertake in life in which we have everything just as we want it. It is so in politics, just as in anything else. We sometimes become dissatisfied and disgusted with the acts of political managers. But leaving the party will not cure the evil. The surest cure is to remain in the party and drive out the unworthy and the unfaithful. In the moment of disappointment and anger some Republicans may now be on the verge of turning their backs upon the ticket named at Chicago. The wisest and safest course in any crisis is to refrain from action until cool, deliberate judgment reasserts itself, until passion gives way to reason.

In a word, if you make sure of Republican success in November you make sure of business success and prosperity for four years to come. Without Republican success the next four years will be fraught with uncertainty and the bottom may fall out of a good many things, not the least important of which is the American workingman's dinner bucket.

Mrs. Charles Rockey Dead.

Mrs. Bertha Lillian Rockey, wife of Charles E. Rockey, died at the home of her mother, Mrs. William L. Steele, on South Spring Street, at two o'clock Monday morning following a lingering illness. In March Mrs. Rockey underwent an operation at the hospital and later a ligament growth and dropsy developed, her condition gradually growing worse until death came as a welcome relief for her sufferings. She was one of the twelve children of the late William L. Steele and had a host of friends in Bellefonte and Zion, where she resided at various times, who greatly mourn her death and sympathize with the bereaved family. Being a member of the Methodist church she died in the steadfast hope that all was well with her Maker and that her suffering and death were not in vain.

Surviving her are her husband, three children, her mother and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. F. P. Crider, Howard, Mrs. A. C. Longee, State College; Mrs. Cecil B. Craig, Creighton; Carl, in the U. S. army at Ft. Meade, S. D.; David, William L., Jr., Frank, Olive, Mrs. Bower Holter, John and Harvey, of Bellefonte.

The funeral took place from the Steele home Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, services being conducted by her pastor Rev. E. H. Yocum, assisted by C. C. Shney. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

Mrs. Mary M. Green Dead.

Following an operation for acute appendicitis, Mrs. Mary M. Green died on Thursday morning of last week at her late home at Filmore. Deceased, who was the wife of G. Dorsey Green, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Gregg, and was born in Penns valley seventy-eight years ago. After her marriage she spent her entire life on the Green homestead on Buffalo Run. She was a kindly, christian lady and her death is deeply mourned by a wide circle of admiring friends. Surviving are her husband and these children: Mrs. W. E. Gray, of Bellefonte; Samuel Green, of Los Angeles, California; Miss Elizabeth Dorsey Green, at home; Allen Green, residing in California, and Dr. George D. Green, of Lock Haven. Funeral services were held from the late home on Saturday morning, after which the remains were brought to Bellefonte and interment made in the Union cemetery.

Charles Snyder Dead.

The venerable Charles Snyder died at the home of his son, John, at State College, on Thursday of last week from infirmities of advanced years, although he was conscious to the end. He was born in Mifflin County November 23, 1823, and was a son of John and Margaret Snyder, pioneer settlers of that section. While still a lad he moved to Centre County with his father, settling on the well known Synder homestead in Ferguson township. Seventy-six years ago he identified himself with the Presbyterian church, a member of the Slab Cabin charge and later of the Pine Grove Mills charge. Politically he was a Democrat of the Jeffersonian type. Two brothers survive: Henry, of White Hall, and James of Kansas. John and Nancy, of State College, are his only children. Burial was made on Saturday at Pine Hall, Rev. W. K. Harnish officiating.

George H. Neiman Dead.

George H. Neiman, a well known and highly respected citizen of Union township, diedon Monday morning, last, following an extended illness, aged 69 years, 11 months and 14 days. Funeral services were held today from the Advent church, interment being made in the lower cemetery at Unionville. The deceased was a splendid type of citizen and his passing away has occasioned the deepest regret among a large number of friends. He was a member of the Free Methodist church, was a brave soldier in the Civil war and was a member of the Bellefonte Lodge of Odd Fellows. He was born in Georges Valley and about twenty-six years ago he bought the farm on which he lived until the time of his death. He was married to Miss Lizzie Knox, who survives with these children: Carrie, at home; Lloyd, residing in California, and William T., of Stormstown. Two sister also survive: Mrs. William B. Turner, of Unionville, and Mrs. William Reasner, of Bellefonte.

Charles Sable, 30 Cook St., Rochester, N.Y., says he recommends Foley Kidney Pills at every opportunity because they have him prompt relief from a bad case kidney trouble that had long bothered me. Such a recommendation, coming from Mr. Sable, is direct and convincing evidence of the great curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills. C. M. Parrish.

Color Analysis.

It is rather interesting to know how a color can be broken up into its constituent parts. Take, for instance, mauve or nile green. How can any one tell just what different colored lights compose such a color? It is all done with the prism, that wonderful little three sided piece of glass used in spectroscopes and other instruments. It is done on the same principle as the analysis of sunlight is accomplished by little particles of water in showing the rainbow. There are only seven primary lights. If sunlight containing all colors falls on a red object all the colors but red are absorbed, the red being reflected to our eyes, so we say the object is red. The prism will not split up red into any other colors, for it is a primary color. So is blue. But if purple be tried we get two colors apart, blue and red. We do not find purple in the spectrum, so any color not found in the spectrum of sunlight is known to be a compound one. It can always be analyzed by the prism.—St. Louis Republic.

Lincoln and Sumner.

Lincoln was modestly proud of his stature and of the effect of the physical man, especially when actuated by noble sentiments. He used to speak of his height to every tall man he met and to propose measuring, another guileless habit of self gratification. The only refusal he is known to have received was from Charles Sumner, who was also tall and proud of his height. Sumner was worrying the president, as he often did, about some perplexing matter when Lincoln abruptly challenged him to measure. "Sumner declined," said Lincoln, "making a fine speech about this being the time for uniting our fronts against the enemy and not our backs. But I guess he was afraid, though he is a good piece of a man. I have never had much to do with bishops where I live; but, do you know, Sumner is my idea of a bishop."—Harper's Weekly.

Didn't Know How Happy He Was.

George Arliss, himself a Britisher, delights in telling stories about his countrymen, especially of the 'Arry and 'Arriet type.

"One day," says he, "I was on Hampstead heath and heard the following conversation between these purely English types:

"Said the man: 'Blow me, 'Arriet, 'ow tired I feel! Miserable too! Wish I'd never been born! Now I've been born, wish I was dead again!'

"'W'at's the matter with yer?' asked 'Arriet. 'W'at yer grumblin' at? Why, w'at on earth would yer 'ave? Yer was drunk on Monday and again on Wednesday, and I'm blessed if yer 'aven't 'ad more than enough today! If that ain't enough pleasure for yer I don't know w'at is. I suppose yer want to be a downright hangel 'ere on earth!'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

No Wonder He Wouldn't Sell.

Captain Amundsen told an amusing story of one of his arctic expeditions. Several of his dogs having died, Captain Amundsen asked one of the natives in his best Eskimo if he would sell him a few dogs. To his surprise, the request was promptly refused. The explorer and the Eskimo had a long argument, the explorer pointing out that he must get dogs somehow and the Eskimo replying that they never sold them.

"Nonsense!" Captain Amundsen exclaimed. "I have often bought dogs."

The Eskimos seemed immensely astonished, and at the end of another argument Captain Amundsen discovered that instead of using the Eskimo word for "dogs" he had been asking the man to sell him some "children."

An Odd Record.

Miss Julia Moore, Sir John Moore's niece, like many very old people, was extremely proud of her age and lost no opportunity of showing it. When she was asked by a friend if she was going to see the coronation of King Edward VII. she answered: "No. I have been out of London for the last three coronations, and I don't care to alter my record." What an exaltation one must feel of being able to say a thing like that!—London Standard.

Ohio and the Buckeye.

The name Buckeye, though of earlier origin, became indelibly affixed to Ohio in the fire eating campaign of 1840, when General William Henry Harrison started out as the Whig candidate for the presidency and shortly became the "log cabin and hard cider" candidate. He was pictured sitting in a rough cabin, a barrel of cider handy to his elbow and strings of buckeyes upon the wall at his back. Cabins of buckeye poles were erected upon wagons and carried in Whig parades. One of the songs of the campaign ran:

We'll wheel it to the capital and place it there elate
For a token and a sign of the bonny Buckeye State.

The predecessors of the modern button men were a credit to the trade. In the Harrison campaign they sold Ohio buckeyes throughout the country, canes from the buckeye tree and woven emblems in the shape of the buckeye leaf. Thenceforth Ohio was the Buckeye State.

The unassertive tree, with its worthless nut and fetid bark, is not, it is true, anything to take a vast pride in. But there's no escaping the sobriquet. That is established—possibly for as long as Ohio is a state.—Toledo Blade.

Greenland's Glaciers.

The iceberg has its birth in the rocky fiords of western Greenland. Under the ever present and irresistible pressure of "Greenland's icy mountains," the great ice cap, the remnant of that which once extended down over the northern part of the present United States, countless glaciers move toward the sea from an elevation of 9,000 feet. This sheet of ice covers an area estimated to be from 300,000 to 400,000 square miles or from six to eight times that of New York state. It is believed that its depth in some parts is more than 6,000 feet. The ice gradually moves down the fiords to the sea level, having a greater or less speed, according to the season of the year, some of the glaciers traveling in the summer time as much as fifty or sixty feet a day.—Exchange.

A Test In Courtesy.

"In banking, as in personal finance," remarked a suburban banker the other day, "the old adage, 'Take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves,' holds good. Just to illustrate. I've been a banker for thirty years. Courtesy made my success largely. A couple of years ago a woman whose brothers were depositors with us dropped in to see me and said she wanted to open an account. I arranged everything and then asked how much her initial deposit would be. When she said $5 I never quavered. I took it. Two days later she deposited $15,000. That account has never averaged less than $5,000 from that day. See what she was up to? She wanted to know how courteously small depositors were treated."—New York Tribune.

One on the Court.

When John Barton Payne was on the bench he was considered a purist and showed impatience if a lawyer slipped a cog and committed a grammatical error. On one occasion he "called" counsel for an assault upon the king's English with intent to maim and took up the examination of the witness himself. Later in the trial the attorney had considerable difficulty in bringing out the location of a certain ash box, and Judge Payne turned to the witness to say sharply:

"You knew this ash box, didn't you?"

"No, your honor," answered the witness, "but I knew of it."

"One on the court," observed Judge Payne. "Proceed with the case."—Chicago Post.

His Deathbed Jest.

When Charles Mathews the elder was lying upon his deathbed a friend, intending to give him a dose of medicine, handed him by accident some ink from a small vial. On discovering when too late the mischief he said, "Good heavens, Mathews, I have given you a dose of ink!"

"Never—never mind, my boy," was the faint reply. "I'll swallow a bit of blotting paper."

Crying Baby Always.

After we solve the nebular hypothesis and get a reasonably sure line on the fourth dimension we shall devote a few hundred years to determining why a woman with a baby comes to a lecture at all. Then we shall try to determine why she always sits in the front seat.—Buffalo News.

MAGNIFIED HER WEALTH.

A Five Dollar Bill That Seemed to Be a Small Fortune.

The woman handed her friend a five dollar bill. "See the number of small fives engraved on it?" she asked. "When I was in Denmark a few years ago such a bill as that caused me a great deal of amusement, and I had to surrender one before I could prove myself clear of a false belief regarding my finances.

"An aunt whom I was visiting saw in my purse one day a number of these bills, and she asked to examine one, as it was so different from any of the Danish money. She studied it attentively a few minutes and then asked me how much it was. I told her it was $5, and, to my surprise, I saw she did not believe me. 'If it is only that amount,' she said, 'why has it so many little figures on it?'

"I tried to explain, but I made little impression on her. Later I heard she had told our relatives that I was 'worth thousands and thousands of dollars' and was trying to conceal the fact from the family lest they should expect some things of me that they would not otherwise.

"When I heard that I was visiting in another part of the country and could not very well defend myself, so I hit on the expedient of sending my aunt a present of a five dollar bill. When she went to have it changed into the money of the country she was at last convinced, though at the price of having her dream of wealth rudely shattered."—New York Press.

A FAMOUS BEACON.

The Navesink Light, Near Sandy Hook, Is a Wonder.

The most powerful light in America is housed on a promontory near Sandy Hook, 250 feet above the beach, where it acts as a safeguard to all ships entering or leaving the harbor of New York. It is called Navesink light and is of 95,000,000 candle power. At fifteen or twenty miles its flash is as pointed and brilliant as a star. On a perfectly clear night its shaft of light can be seen 100 miles at sea. When it was erected it was operated at twice its present candle power. But ocean pilots objected to its strength, saying that so amazing an electric flash actually blinded them and interfered with their work. Uncle Sam heard the prayer of the pilots and turned down his pet lamp to 95,000,000 candle power.

The amount of oil consumed by the engine that provides the power for the light is only one gallon and seven-eighths an hour. That is the astonishing thing to the unscientific visitor—the comparatively small expense and effort required to maintain so great a light. There are two fair sized dynamos and two oil engines. One set is always kept in reserve. Of course the tremendous candle power is developed by means of a great lens, made in France. The lens weighs seven tons and a half, is seven inches thick and rests in mercury. It is revolved with ease.—Saturday Evening Post.

Purely Mental.

Mrs. Holden had been blessed with remarkable eyesight all her life. It was a great trial to her when at the age of seventy-two she was obliged to put on "reading glasses." "But they are really becoming to you, Aunt Hilda," said a gentle niece by way of consolation.

"No, they aren't," said Mrs. Holden, with her usual scorn for compliment. "Anybody's eyes look better without a glass in front of 'em, and you know it."

"But you couldn't read without them," ventured the niece, "and you love"—

"I could, too, read without 'em," said the old lady, refusing to be soothed. "I could read most as well as ever, but I couldn't sense it all—that's the only trouble."—Youth's Companion.

To Give Farmers Facts.

A campaign of publicity which will reach every milk producer, stock breeder and dealer, meat dealers and county authorities has been outlined by Dr. C. J. Marshall, State veterinarian, as a practical means to spread information as to what the State hopes to do and the acts of assembly under which it acts. This campaign is to be conducted by means of circulars and will be of considerable advantage to farmers because it will be a systematic effort to put into his hands information about statutes in terse form.

It is the plan to issue circulars giving information as to the means for control of dangerous and infectious diseases of stock and for the protection of milk supplies. Another set will tell how the State controls inter-State shipments of stock, supervision and inspection of animals and how farmers may help.

The work of the State meat inspection service is to be outlined in the same manner for the farmers and for the meat dealers, wholesale and retail and ways to make the service effective presented.

Finally a circular will be sent out pointing to the ways and means of destroying wild dogs which cause a loss of thousands of dollars annually to sheep and also the provisions of State laws and board rules in case of rabies.

Mrs. Laura Bechdel last week visited with friends in Williamsport.

George Page visited with his family over Sunday and attended the Children's Day services at the Baptist church.

Mrs. Nathan Kunes is entertaining two of her nieces from Philipsburg.

Mrs. Eagan on Saturday entertained six young lady friends at luncheon.

Mrs. Charles Hockman, of State College, is visiting her brother, Lanson Moon.

Edward Winslow, of Johnsonburg, is spending a week with his mother, Mrs. John Abbott.

Mrs. Clarissa A. Kunes and daughter, Miss Blanche, were in Williamsport for the Clark-Hoover nuptials.

Miss Margaret F. Glossner last Thursday returned home from the State Normal School at West Chester.

Mr. Cramer and family, of Virginia, are spending a few weeks with his brother-in-law, Lanson Moon, in Beech Creek.

A dear little son arrived at the Charles Winslow home last Thursday. Both mother and child are getting along very nicely.

The stork on Saturday visited the home of Fred Packer, leaving behind a fine girl baby. Both mother and little one are getting along splendidly.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Claire Bowes, of near Blanchard, has been quite ill and we all sincerely hope for the little one's speedy recovery.

The Baptists held their Children's Day services last Sunday night. The exercises by the children were very good. The singing was splendid and the church was crowded, netting a fine little sum. The leaders in the services and all others who participated deserve special mention for doing their best, as they always do to make everything in the church a success and thereby strengthen the hold on the young people.

Miss Olive Blanche Clark gave all but her intimate friends a surprise when she was married on Tuesday afternoon of last week at Williamsport to Lewis Chester Hoover, of Altoona. The wedding ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mark Champion, Rev. Elliott C. Armstrong, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover will be at home at Altoona after July 15. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Wilson Clark, of Blanchard, and a grand-daughter of Mrs. Clarissa A. Kunes. The groom is a merchant in Altoona and is well and favorably known by a host of friends in his home city.

Superintendent Johnson and other Pennsylvania Railroad officials from Tyrone last Friday met by appointment some of our citizens, including business men, at the Eagleville station. The meeting was arranged to hear the claims of our people for a new railroad station to supplant the present antiquated flag station. Since the company plans numerous changes along the line, including a removal of the present track to another location, it was deemed advisable to confer with the officials before the improvements are made. The object in asking for a new station is to secure for our people better and more suitable accommodations. One strong argument in favor of the requested improvement is that considerable patronage is constantly being lost by the Pennsylvania and gained by the New York Central. It is proposed moving the track about 100 feet further up the hill at the present Eagleville station, which will necessitate quite a cut. This will be fully twenty two feet at that point, thus placing the wagon road overhead. Beyond Eagleville station, the roadbed will follow a new course to the Howard rolling mill. As has already been pointed out, the track will be moved from the present location at Howard and placed along the Bald Eagle. The new route through Eagleville will extend directly through the farmhouse and barn of Frank Kessinger, and for the removal of these buildings and eight acres of land he receives $8,500. Several dwelling houses are also in the line of the right way, which has been purchased quietly and with little or no difficulty. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has manifested a desire to be fair with all, and the people adopted a like course in the transactions.

Mt. Eagle.

Miss Ida Daughenbaugh, of Howard, was here a day or two ago, riding her broncho.

Mrs. Anderson, of Altoona, and Mrs. Hileman spent Tuesday at the J. R. Pheasant home.

Miss Mason, of Williamsport, enjoyed a visit over Sunday with her mother, Mrs. George Deitz.

Miss Gertrude Leathers is spending the week at Jacksonville with her friend, Miss Rosetta Yearick.

John Bowers, of Altoona, was here several days ago on business connected with the railroad improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Aikey, of Bellwood, spent Sunday here with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Deitz.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moore and children, of State College, spent several days here looking after their interests on the farm.

Mt. Eagle is as busy as a bee hive this week. The railroad contractors are here, also the steam shovels, dinkey and men to do the work.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Kennedy Methodist Episcopal church will hold an ice cream and cake social on the church grounds on Saturday evening.

The Code Duello

A Story Showing How a Small Circumstance May Turn the Scale of Advantage

By ARNOLD D. EWING

A few years before the war between the states I was obliged to go from my northern home to South Carolina. I was sitting one evening in a cafe with a friend when a discussion arose at a table near me between an elderly man and one who was, at least by comparison, young. The latter had been sitting alone at the table when the former entered the cafe, stood at the entrance looking about him, then walked with a limp to where the other was sitting and, taking a chair, called for a julep. Neither spoke to the other, and it was evident they were strangers.

But presently the older man addressed a remark to the younger, which led to conversation. At that time the pro and anti slavery parties were contending, the one to make Kansas a free, the other a slave state. The man who had entered last began to inveigh against the "border ruffians," as they were called in the north, at the same time charging them with committing innumerable crimes. I was rather surprised at this, since he spoke with a distinct southern accent, though at that time the southern people were not united on the slavery question, indeed were not united even after the war commenced.

The younger man took issue with his neighbor, averring that the south had the right to carry their institutions into the new territories as well as the north. Whereupon the other became violent and abusive. The advocate of those who were trying to make Kansas a slave state endeavored to withdraw from the discussion, but his opponent would not permit him. Finally the latter, waxing wrothy, declared that the proslavery movement in Kansas was conceived in iniquity and any man who advocated it was a scoundrel.

The other's cheek burned, but he controlled himself, whereupon his opponent, who was evidently disposed to drive him to the wall, said that a man who had such opinions and declined to defend them was a coward. This forced the younger man to resent the insult offered him, and, drawing a card from his pocket, he handed it to his insulter.

"I haven't a cahd with me, suh," said the challenged man, "but with yo' pe'mission I will write my name on the back of yo's. I will send a friend to yo' immediately to arrange a meeting at 4 o'clock tomorrow morning. I must leave the city at 6 on impo'tant business."

"And I, sir," replied the other, "have an important engagement in the early morning which will prevent my fighting you till later."

"If yo' mean, suh, to crawl out o' the affair I should be glad to know it now."

The goaded man, seeing me and my friend sitting at another table witnessing this imputation on his courage, said coolly to his tormentor:

"Very well; since you wish to be killed before breakfast I will put off my other engagement and kill you. I will be at home for the rest of the evening, where I shall await the coming of your friend."

He arose from his chair and went out, leaving his opponent in possession of the field.

He had no sooner disappeared than the man who had provoked him beckoned to my friend Mortimer, who left me and went with him to an unoccupied corner of the room, and the two held a conference in a low tone. When it was over Mortimer returned to me and gave me a few words of explanation. He said that he was to be the second in the coming meeting of the man whom he had conferred with, Colonel Ringold. He had commanded a regiment of volunteers in the Mexican war, was a planter who owned slaves and a man of high standing in the community. Why he had provoked the man he had sat with—Jerrold was his name—Mortimer did not say.

I had a desire to see the end of what to me was a very singular affair, and, fortunately for my purpose, being a physician, Mortimer agreed to take me with him in the capacity of surgeon. Meanwhile I was to say nothing about the matter. Colonel Ringold had not given his true name, and his opponent did not know who he was. Since Mortimer and I were the only persons besides the principals and the colonel would stay at home until he went to the ground the secret was not likely to come out.

I confess I had been much prejudiced against Colonel Ringold for forcing a quarrel upon one who seemed an inoffensive man.

"You think Jerrold an inoffensive man, do you?" said Mortimer. "Well, I will tell you about him. He is one of those persons who grow up under the dueling system—it is rapidly dying out here in the south I am happy to say—who, having acquired great skill with arms, conceive a passion for making as many victims as possible. He can kill the colonel if he wishes to do so, but I shall use diplomacy to induce him to be content to wing his enemy. There are but two persons who know why the colonel insulted him—the colonel and myself. Jerrold does not know it; you do not know it, and I shall not tell you till the affair is over. The probability is, however, that it will lead to another fight."

This fraction of a story left me more puzzled than before. Indeed, my curiosity was excited to such a pitch that I did not sleep a wink during the brief interval before the meeting. I was called at 3 in the morning by Mortimer and, with my case of surgical instruments, entered a carriage in waiting and drove to the ground.

The colonel was there, standing alone in the gray of the morning. It seemed to me that his expression indicated some special purpose, by which he was much moved. Since he knew he was to meet a man who was considered invincible, he must have felt that death for him was almost certain. There was a far away look in his eye, such as a man might have who dreads to leave those he loves and who love him. While I had been prejudiced against him a few hours before, I now took him into my heart.

While I was regarding him a carriage rolled up and out stepped Jerrold and his second and his own surgeon. The colonel as the challenged party had chosen Derringer pistols, which were used at that time in duels. The seconds paced off the ground, and since it was long before sunrise and cloudy at that there was no toss up for choice of position. Colonel Ringold stood in one spot until his second placed him in the position from which he was to fight. It was but a few paces from where he stood, but I noticed when he took them the same limp was apparent as when he had entered the cafe the previous evening. Just before the first fire, when all was ready except to give the signal, Mortimer whispered in my ear:

"Whatever you discover keep it to yourself."

He then took a position midway between the two at the side and, holding a handkerchief in his hand, dropped it. Jerrold fired in the air; the colonel's bullet grazed his adversary's sleeve.

To my surprise—Mortimer did not appear to share it—the colonel called for another shot. The two were again placed in position, the signal given, and two shots rang out. Jerrold was unhurt; the colonel fell. I ran to him; but, getting up with difficulty, he motioned me to keep away. Standing as firmly as before, he called for a third shot.

If I was puzzled at seeing him fall and then get up, his antagonist was amazed. Not a drop of blood was to be seen, though his trousers were torn.

When the two were standing waiting for the next signal I glanced at Jerrold and saw at once that something was the matter with him.

I have since thought that at the moment the signal for the third shot was given Jerrold was suffering from indecision. He had gone on to the field intending to wing his advisary and was now undecided whether to kill him or not. Indecision at a critical moment is usually fatal. It delayed Jerrold's shot. At any rate, it was not fired till after he had received the colonel's bullet in his lungs. His struck the earth a few paces before him, he having pulled the trigger of his pistol spasmodically with a bullet in him.

Jerrold's surgeon ran to him. I, not knowing at the time where Jerrold's bullet had gone, advanced toward the colonel to see if he had been hit. He stood motionless, not appearing to be aware of my presence. Noticing the tear in his trousers and lifting the cloth, I made the discovery that Mortimer had cautioned me against bringing to the attention of others.

The leg was of wood.

At that moment the sound of galloping horses was heard, and a carriage dashed up to the dueling ground. Out jumped a young man, not more than twenty years old, who at a glance took in the situation, then, rushing up to Colonel Ringold, threw his arms about him.

"Oh, father!" he exclaimed. "Why did you do it?"

"Because I didn't wish to lose my boy."

It was a strange scene. Jerrold sitting on the ground, leaning against his second, coughing up blood and looking at the father and son embracing each other. Then doubtless the cause of the insult of the night before was apparent to him. He had insulted the younger Ringold, intending to show his skill in killing him, and was to have fought him on this same morning. But, insulted by the boy's father, whom he did not know, he had put off the duel with the one to accommodate the other.

All was so plain now that the wounded man must have surmised it. But he said nothing. He was taken in his carriage to a hospital, and I was pleased to hear afterward that, after having recovered, the affair had made a changed man of him, and he had resolved never to fight another duel.

Mortimer, by his diplomacy, as he called it, saved the colonel's life. When bearing the colonel's challenge he prevailed upon Jerrold, for Jerrold's own good, to wound the colonel in such a way that he could not continue the fight, for he represented the colonel to be an obstinate and determined man, who, once in a fight, would continue it till he was put hors de combat. Jerrold, having another duel on hand to follow in the wake of the first and fearing to excite antagonism against himself, fell in with the idea. Mortimer suggested that Jerrold, when convinced that his enemy would kill him if he could, should break his leg so that he could not stand upon it to continue the fight, Mortimer knowing that one leg would be advanced and receive the bullet and that that leg was the wooden one. It was a makeshift at best and resulted in Jerrold's discomfiture.

Luck of the Cross Eyed Cat

Or, the Omen of Bad Luck

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Where did it come from?" demanded Bob Sabin, boss of the logging camp.

The camp cook waved a floury hand in midair. "Search me," he said frankly. "Here I sat making these here biscuits when all of a suddint my eyes felt queer and I looked up to see that critter staring at me big as life. I swan it give me a turn to look at it."

"I never saw a cross eyed cat before," remarked Sabin, surveying the large black, lean looking feline which had appeared in camp that morning. The cat had been washing its face industriously, but under Sabin's steady scrutiny it suddenly ceased its labors and stared back at him uncannily.

The right eye was large and yellow, with dilating black pupil in its proper place, but the left orb was marred by a decided cast. In fact, the pupil of the eye manifested a desire to disappear entirely behind the animal's nose.

"I wonder if it means bad luck?" mused Sabin.

Later in the day Sabin remembered the cross eyed cat, and with a thought to the ingrained superstitions of some of his men and the unnecessary talk that would be exchanged among them, to the detriment of their work, he ordered Smith, a newcomer, to carry the cat to where the highway crossed a little section of woods wherein they were working and there leave the cat.

Glad of any relief from the tedium of hauling logs to the river bank, young Smith picked up the black cat and carried it, unresisting, into the shadow of the woods. An hour later he returned to say that he had left the black cat sitting in the middle of the highway.

"Gave me a creepy feeling down the spine as I walked away," he remarked at supper, "and I turned and looked back, and I know you won't believe what I'm going to tell you," he concluded hastily.

"Oh, yes, we will," chorused his companions. "Fire ahead, Smithy!"

"I turned and looked back, and by cricky, boys, that cat had shifted her position so that she was looking after me with them crossed eyes of hers, and I never want to see a more evil smile on anybody's face than there was on hers."

"Huh!"

"A cat smile."

"Ain't you going it ruther strong, Smithy?"

"Remember this ain't no 'Alice In Wonderland' party," protested another.

Amid the chorus of gibes Bob Sabin's clear voice startled them into silence.

"If you don't believe Smith, just look there, boys," he said quietly.

There was silence as the eight men turned and looked at the spot which he had indicated. There, on the edge of the timber growth, sat the black, cross eyed cat, an evil smile curving her wide mouth.

"Good heavens! I'm not going to have that thing around here!" ejaculated Peterson, springing from his chair.

"What are you going to do?" he was asked.

"Fill her full of lead," he announced ominously.

But there was a murmur of protest from his companions. Sabin watched them curiously, noting the element of superstition that tinged their handling of this matter. His men were composed of Americans, Swedes and French Canadians, and of them all the French men were the most excitable.

"Ah, m'sieu," appealed Jean Fabrois to his boss, "pray let us not harm ze evil eyed cat! None of us have too mooch of ze good fortune to take ze reesk. I myself will take her gently away and lose her."

"That's the best plan, Peterson," said Sabin, with a nod toward the man who was seeking his gun. Peterson was disappointed and came back to the table.

"There's only one way you can lose that cat," he grumbled.

Young Smith nodded his head. "She certainly came back!" he ejaculated.

"What will you do, Jean?"

"Ah, take her in ze darkness and lose her forever in ze tangle of woods on ze other side of ze river," rattled the Frenchman gayly.

"That's a good idea, Jean," commended Sabin, rising from the table. "Take the small boat and be back as soon as possible. We can't let a cat interfere with our work in the morning. It's an important matter that we get this log down without delay."

"Oui, m'sieu," responded Jean Faboris as he suddenly swooped down upon the cross eyed cat and caught it dexterously in his large hands. As he disappeared in the direction of the rippling river his comrades exchanged smiles of amusement and concern.

"Her vill come back," said Larsen, the big Swede, as he pushed heavily away from the table.

"I'll give her three times to come back. The last time will be my turn," warned Peterson ominously.

Next day the big drive occurred, and Sabin and a number of picked men went down to Double forks hoping to avert a repetition of the trouble of the previous year. The river was running full, for the spring freshets had added their share to the brimming stream.

The logs came down a roaring, tumbling chaos of blackness, now and then tossing out a dark arm as the pressure from behind became heavier. Sabin, tall and muscular and handsome, stood on the east bank of the river at the forks and watched the logs crowding around the bend. On either bank his men were strung along with poles, standing ready to risk life and limb the instant necessity called for it. All wore rough corduroy clothing and long hip boots.

"If this lot gets through all right we'll be safe this time," muttered Sabin to young Smith, who stood close beside him.

They looked upstream where the white foam bubbled around a mass of tumbling logs. It was a great sight, especially when a log was tossed twenty feet in the air to come crashing down upon its fellows in the water. The two men were so interested in the sight of the approaching logs that they did not realize at first what had happened when Peterson's voice was megaphoned across the river.

"Jam there!" he yelled. "Jam!"

Sabin looked. It was true.

Across the river directly in front of them and at its narrowest point the logs had jammed into a wall that momentarily grew wider as more logs were added as they floated down.

Somewhere in that maze of tree trunks was one log that formed the key to the situation. Locate that log and pry it loose and the wall would be broken. Then the rest of the drive would follow like a flock of sheep.

Sabin frowned and swore a little. There was a chorus of indignant yells as suddenly there broke from the woods on the west bank of the river a lean, black streak that shot out in one flying leap and landed on one of the logs that formed the lower end of the barrier.

"The cross eyed cat!" yelled Peterson through the megaphone. Then he danced angrily up and down as he continued: "I knew it would bring us bad luck, Mr. Sabin. If I can borrow a gun I'd like to knock it into flinders! May I?"

"Don't be a fool, Peterson!" shouted back his employer. "One of you fellows get out there and start that jam, and I guess the cat will get all that's coming to him."

There was a moment's conference among the men on the west bank, and then Peterson leaped to the nearest of the closely packed logs and made his way cautiously toward the outer edge of the jam. He carried a gun.

All at once the lumbermen met with another surprise. From the same point in the woods from whence had come the cross eyed cat there darted a girl's slender form. She wore a red cloak, and a red knitted cap was tossed on the back of her wind blown dark hair. She looked neither to the left or right. Her gaze seemed transfixed upon the small black form of the cross eyed cat and the gun in Peterson's hand.

Almost on the heels of Peterson she leaped fearlessly to the floating logs and then darted from one to another until she panted close behind Peterson's big form. The boss lumberman on the shore watched her with panic stricken eyes. If the jam should break, as it might any instant, what chance would that frail girl have among the grinding logs? Peterson, big and strong as he was, realized that he was taking a chance in trying to break the jam.

"Coward!" cried the girl, her voice ringing clearly above the boiling of the water among the logs. As she spoke she snatched Peterson's gun from his nerveless hand and flung it into the stream. Then she leaped to the enormous pine log on which the cross eyed cat sat and clasped the uncanny creature in her arms. Then she arose and for the first time seemed to realize the situation.

Her life was not worth an instant's purchase if the jam broke. She turned terror stricken eyes toward Peterson, who indulged in one of his fierce fits of anger, laughed contemptuously at her and leisurely picked his way over the logs, pretending to scrutinize each one—searching for the key log that would break the jam.

Sabin watched the two for one long minute. Then, with an indrawn breath of mingled rage and fear, he set his foot on the nearest log and went to the rescue of the girl. As he lifted her fainting form in his arms, together with the black cat, which she still carried wrapped in the folds of her red cloak, he left the great pine log on which the cross eyed cat had deigned to sit. Sabin's foot had barely left the log when it shivered slightly.

"The key log—she's breaking now!" shouted Sabin and raced for the nearest shore.

As he stumbled up the river bank with his double load of lovely girl and cross eyed black cat there came a crashing boom from the river as the jam broke and the logs went thundering down to their destination.

After beautiful Maisie Woods had departed for home with her lost pet—yes, the cross eyed black cat—big Peterson approached the lumber boss shamefacedly enough.

"I suppose you'll want me to hand in my time, sir," he muttered. "It's all the luck of that cross eyed cat."

"Nonsense!" returned Sabin brightly, a happy light in his dark eyes. "Stay on, Peterson, and try to remember that the cross eyed cat broke the jam, after all. If anybody can show me a better mascot than a cross eyed black cat I'd like to be shown."

After Sabin had married Maisie Woods and had become part owner of the black cat they understood what he meant.

Curious Choice of a Wife.

Some years ago an English curate surprised his parishioners by marrying a widow considerably older than himself. The astonishment was still greater when the cause was known. The curate had become engaged to a young girl whose frivolous conduct soon led him to regret the step. He offered a settlement for his release, but it was refused. He endeavored in every way to break the engagement, but without success.

"Is there nothing I can do to escape this?" he exclaimed one day in despair.

"Yes," remarked the girl's mother, who was present and who had been the prime mover in the marriage negotiations, "by marrying me."

The curate decided if he had to marry one of the two he preferred the mother and accepted her. The young girl soon married a wealthy stockbroker.

Nature Teaches Inventors.

"We get our hints from nature," the inventor said. "Take, for instance, the hollow pillar, which is stronger than the solid one. The wheat straw showed us the superior strength of the hollow pillar. Solid, the wheat straw would be unable to support its head of grain. Where did man get his idea for carriage springs? From the hoofs of the horse, which, like the springs derived from them, are made from parallel plates. Scissors we get from the jaws of the tortoise, which are natural scissors; chisels from the squirrel, who carries them in his mouth; adzes from the hippopotamus, whose ivories are adzes of the best design; the plane from the bee's jaws; the triphammer from the woodpecker."

The Gordian Knot.

The Gordian knot was said to have been made of thongs used as a harness to the wagon of Gordius, king of Phrygia. Whosoever loosened this knot, the ends of which were not discoverable, the oracle declared should be ruler of Persia. Alexander the Great cut away the knot with his sword until he found the ends of it and thus, in a military sense at least, interpreted the oracle, 330 B. C.

Garrick's Wonderful Face.

Garrick had a poor opinion of the French actors of his day, and when in Paris for six months in 1763 to show what he could do without the aid of the usual accessories of the stage he gave private performances to audiences that quickly succumbed to the spell of his art. He told stories, gave scenes from Shakespeare and acted dramas in dumb show. There are familiar tales concerning his wonderful mobility of features and body, of his power to "create a new physiognomy which his friends did not recognize." There is the story, for instance, that Garrick posed to Hogarth for the portrait of Fielding after Fielding's death. And there is the other story that in sitting to Reynolds Garrick so completely changed his facial expression three times in succession that the artist flung down his brush and declared that he believed "he was painting from the devil." His French auditors were subjected to the same sensations.

His Hold on Fame.

Sir Henry Irving was playing his annual London engagement once when Nansen, then in the height of his fame as an arctic explorer, came back from an expedition in search of the north pole. The curtain was just about to rise one evening when Stoker came behind the scenes with news that Nansen was sitting in the royal box. Irving received the news in silence.

A few minutes later one of the members of the company bustled up to the star to tell him the same thing. Irving merely grunted. And right on the heels of this up came a fluttering woman super and said:

"Oh, Sir Henry, did you know the great Nansen was out front?"

"Nansen? Nansen?" said Irving as though he were trying to remember who this person Nansen might be. "Oh yes—the chap who stands the cold so well!"—Saturday Evening Post.

A Cook's Accidental Discovery.

One of the best ways of cooking potatoes was accidentally discovered through the unpunctuality of a train. When the line from Paris to St. Germain was opened the first train carried an official party for whom lunch was ordered. The meal was fixed for noon, and shortly before that hour the potatoes were put on to fry. A few minutes afterward a message came that the train would probably be delayed for an hour, so the potatoes were taken off the fire, but left in the pan. Then came a second message, "Train just arriving," and the potatoes were hurriedly put back to fry again. When the party sat down to lunch the potatoes were brought on with the steak. Each chip was then found to be blown out like a small, crisp, golden balloon to the delight of the guests. The cook without knowing it had invented pommes de terre soufflés.

A Parable.

Two men stood watching a steam shovel at work. With a clatter and a roar the shovel bit into a steep bank, closed on a carload of earth and dumped it onto a waiting freight train.

"It drives me wild," said the first onlooker, "to see that monster taking the bread out of good men's mouths. Look at it! Why, it's filling up those flat cars faster than a hundred men with picks and shovels could do it."

But the other onlooker shook his head and answered:

"See here, mister; if it would be better to employ a hundred men with picks and shovels on this job wouldn't it be better still, by your way of thinking, to employ a thousand men with forks and tablespoons?"—New York Tribune.

Boat Racing in the Old Days.

Boat racing was a very different affair from what it is now, when the first boat race between Oxford and Cambridge came off at Henley in 1829. Oxford won, wearing "blue checks" and sporting black straw hats with a broad blue ribbon, while Cambridge was in white with pink waist bands and high hats. The weights of the racing boats used at this time may be judged from the fact that when they were converted from eights to six oars, with seats for passengers added, they could easily carry twenty persons.—London Chronicle.

Courting An Artist

A Practical Man Chooses a Practical Method of Wooing

By GERTRUDE STORM

A girl—I call her a girl, though she was twenty-seven years old—sat before an easel in the Pitti gallery in Florence, Italy, copying one of Titian's portraits. Though she was tastefully dressed, her clothes had been made over from time to time, and patches were evident. Her face indicated that ideality which must be a part of the true artist. Notwithstanding her shabby genteel appearance she was comely, with dark eyes, fair skin and hair between a chestnut and red, which, under the sunlight coming in through a window, gave it the exact tint of the locks belonging to the woman whose portrait she was copying. But she was not thinking of herself or her appearance. She was simply trying to earn a little money by making a copy of a famous picture, a copy that has little value except in the name to which it is appended.

On the other side of the gallery stood a gentleman whose appearance was the opposite of that of the woman. He had nothing of that ideality she possessed, but he had an appearance of prosperity contrasting with her shabbiness. He stood looking at her face, from which the sunlight was slowly passing, and something told him that there sat the woman he wanted to be the complement of his own life. After having gazed upon her for some time he crossed the room and stood behind her, looking at her half finished work. He had never seen her before; he had not heard her speak, yet he knew that she was an American. Possibly part of his ability to divine this was that he was an American himself.

"I beg your pardon," he said to the girl. "Would you be offended at a bit of criticism on your work?"

"On the contrary, I would be very grateful."

"Well, then, instead of doing what you are capable of doing you are doing that which you are not fitted to do."

"Please explain."

"Judging from your cast of countenance I fancy you have an artistic temperament. On that I build my theory that you originate for yourself. I do not believe there was ever a good originator who was a good copyist."

"Go on. I am interested."

"I speak from experience. I am myself incapable of origination, and I am incapable of copying. But I possess a faculty that lies between the two. I can imitate. You see the difference between imitating and copying?"

"I think I do."

"Well, to return to you. You are not copying that picture. You are constantly led away from it by your own conceptions. The result is failure."

The girl threw down her brush.

"Have you any of your own work in Florence?" asked the critic.

"Lots of it."

"May I see it?"

"I would be only too glad of your criticism upon it."

She gave him the number of a house overlooking the river Arno with her name, Margaret Hathorn, and he handed her his card bearing that of John Cahoon, making an appointment to call next afternoon.

He climbed five flights of stairs to find Miss Hathorn and was ushered into her studio, parlor, bedroom and kitchen in one. The woman of whom she rented the room sat sewing by a window. Miss Hathorn placed an easel in a convenient light and put one picture after another upon it.

"You are what I supposed," said Cahoon, "an artist, and you are what I suspected—yourself, not another. Your natural field is all your own."

"Then why cannot I sell my pictures?"

He smiled. "It took me a number of years to gain an experience to enable me to answer that question to my own satisfaction. I cannot answer it more intelligibly than by giving you a brief synopsis of my own artistic career. A poor boy, I loved art and wished to be an artist. My friends all told me my work was admirable, but in time I found out that it was worthless. To keep from starving I tried copying and failed even at that.

"A picture dealer whom I knew declared that he could tell if any picture of a great master were genuine without looking at the name on it. I painted one with a work of Giotto before me. The subject was my own. All the rest was Giotto's. In other words, my work was an imitation. I rubbed dirt and soot over it, then partially cleaned it and showed it to the dealer as an original Giotto I had discovered in the possession of one who did not know its value. He offered an immense sum for it. I laughed at him, confessing that I had painted the picture.

"He was not an overscrupulous person and agreed to give me a paying price for the picture and for other equally successful imitations of the great masters. I declined his offer, but made several such imitations which were exposed as originals. By selling these few pictures I could have made myself rich. The public I expected to deceive, but I supposed the critics understood their professional work. They were all or nearly all fooled.

"I gave up painting and gradually worked into a business of selling pictures, principally to Americans who care more for the name than the picture. By hunting up poor or indifferent works attributed to celebrated painters and selling them for what they really were I gained a fortune. It did not matter that I told those who bought them that I considered them worthless. All they wished was to be able to say that they were genuine. My conscience was clear."

Mr. Cahoon paused, and Miss Hathorn said she understood. The former continued:

"I think, I am sure, that I see in you and your work a born artist. I advise you to paint your own pictures, and I have a plan by which you may support yourself in the meantime. I will buy from you several of these pictures that I consider above the average, paying you what is today more than they are worth, but what after you have made a reputation will be less than they will be worth. It is a fair deal."

"You take all the risk."

"And pocket all the profit."

"But when I have used up all you pay me for these I shall be again stranded."

"Yes, without assistance which I propose to furnish in some such legitimate way as I furnish the beginning. We are partners, you producing the ideal part of the goods we sell, I the practical part. Moreover, I shall, as the capitalist of the firm, take the lion's share of the profit."

Miss Hathorn was puzzled. She could not understand this interest in a career for her in a stranger. She stood mute thinking about what he had said, while he, selecting certain pictures, set them aside, saying, "I will give you so many francs for this and so many for that," and when he had finished he figured up the amount, saying that he would send for his property and remit the money to pay for it at the same time.

The girl thanked him mechanically, half doubting whether he would keep his promise, but when a messenger arrived for the pictures with an envelope containing notes enough to keep her in the inexpensive city of Florence for more than a year she feared that the transaction was intended to draw her into a trap. However, she was an artist with pictures to sell and solaced herself with the thought that in any event she was capable of taking care of herself.

A change came over Miss Hathorn when, a week later, she received a note from Mr. Cahoon stating that he had sold two of her pictures to persons who valued them for their intrinsic worth for a sum equal to what he had paid her for all. To verify his statement he sent copies of letters ordering the pictures and stating the terms. If the artist was puzzled before she was now all the more so. Since genius is unconscious she set very little value upon her pictures, but she well knew that, while poor pictures with a name will bring a large price, poor pictures without a name are a drug on the market. It began to dawn upon her that, after all, her pictures must have merit.

Mr. Cahoon kept in touch with Miss Hathorn from that time. He was of no assistance to her in her work, but was quite valuable in the sale of her pictures. Indeed, she had learned most of what she could be taught and had reached that point where persons of originality begin to throw off the propensity to follow leaders and strike out on their own paths. At first her work was not understood, but after a few pictures had been hung in positions where the public could inspect them a taste for Miss Hathorn's work began to grow, and in a couple of years she found herself able to sell her pictures without Mr. Cahoon's assistance.

However, he had meanwhile passed from the condition of a stranger to that of acquaintance and finally a friend. He was often in her mind, for there was that which was singular about him. She knew him for a man who could have made money dishonestly, but had succeeded in making it honestly. And, moreover, she realized that he had taken her from failure and poverty and raised her to success and competence.

But why had he done this?

One evening while walking with him in the beautiful Boboli gardens back of the gallery where they had first met she was expressing her gratitude for what he had done for her and asked him point blank for the reason of his doing so.

"The time has come," he said, "for me to explain. When I looked across the room where you were copying and saw you sitting at your work, the sunlight tinting your face and hair, I recognized you for the one woman in the world whom I wanted. It would have been out of the question for me to woo a stranger in the usual way. I did not think you could be won by such a wooing. Fortunately I thought I saw in you indications of the artist, and when I saw your work my opinion was confirmed. You may have thought I was kind to you or that I was disposed to make money out of your pictures. My object was neither of these. I served you for a consideration of another kind. I wished you. And now I call upon you to pay—dearly you may think it—for what I have done for you. I ask in return yourself, and you know that wedding bells for a woman sound the knell of an artistic career."

Miss Hathorn paid the bill and willingly; but, being a true artist, she found much comfort during her married life with her brush.

The Crops.

Bradstreet's Report says: Good reports come from all the leading crops except corn. For the latter the weather is too cool, and a long late fall is necessary to make a good crop.

Winter-wheat harvesting in the southwest was delayed by rains, but these benefited corn. Harvesting is general in Oklahoma, and that state will have 20,000,000 to 22,000,000 bushels. The four states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Missouri are expected to have a total crop of 161,000,000 bushels, a gain of 23,000,000 bushels, or 17 per cent., above last year, but wheat in Ohio is a practical failure. Some improvement is shown in Illinois and Indiana. Reports from the Pacific northwest as to wheat are excellent.

Aside from complaints as to a few dry spots in North Dakota, the reports as to spring wheat are practically ideal. Indeed, any change from now on apparently must be in the direction of impairment, so good is the present prospect.

Corn needs warmth in the west if the bad effects of the crop's late start are to be overcome. The crop is generally small for the season, and in parts of the east where canning corn is the chief product, rain is needed.

Oats look well despite a late start, and cool weather has helped this grain at the expense of corn.

Hay promises well, but reports as to the prospects of a bumper crop are rather less buoyant, because warm growing weather has not been sufficient to allow the plant taking advantage of the abundant moisture of the spring.

The Ohio clover-seed crop looks well, but the area is small.

Southern crop reports, aside from those received from the sugar country, are generally good; indeed, the best so far received this season.

Predicts Good Apple Crop.

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture L. L. Martin has prepared a statement in which he estimates that the apple crop of the State will be about seventy-five per cent. of the normal. He bases his statement on reports received from observations and is inclined to think that he has made the estimate on the best information obtainable.

"I have been asked a good many times about the apple crop in view of the alarming rumors about it and am inclined to think that despite the cold of last winter Pennsylvania will have some good apples," said he. "I have noticed that the commercial orchards are in fair shape and that many of the family orchards have been well protected so that it is reasonable to suppose that many farms will have apples, where a short time ago it was feared there would be no crop.

"Many of the trees were damaged but the owners gave them prompt attention after the weather moderated. The apple situation is not as bad as some imagined last spring, but as to other fruits I am not so confident."

Health Certificates to Wed.

Members of the Lutheran Ministerial Association in Pittsburg have decided that in the future they will not marry persons who fail to produce medical certificates along with marriage licenses. The Lutheran synod will be petitioned to adopt this rule, and ministers of all other denominations in Pittsburg will be asked to join in the campaign.

This decision was reached following the reading by the Rev. W. C. Mann of a paper on "Physical Examination for Marriage." In a lively discussion which followed a motion was made to have only the man present a medical certificate, but this was amended to read a medical certificate for both.

A committee composed of the Rev. Mr. Mann, Rev. Mr. Hanson and the Rev. Mr. Clair was appointed to draw up a memorial to the synod and present it at the meeting this week. A copy of the resolution will be sent to the other ministerial associations.

Delaware's Fruit Crop.

A delayed spring, which at the time was looked upon as a misfortune by fruit growers in Sussex county, in Delaware, is now being regarded as the luckiest thing that could have happened, and orchardists everywhere are declaring that the outlook for a big fruit crop in Delaware, and especially in Sussex county, is exceedingly bright. Cool weather continued during the blossoming period, and as a result killed the operations of the coddling moth, which hatches the eggs that produces core curculio and ruins many apple crops.

Inspection of the green apple shows that they have been but very little affected, and with a little picking of bad-looking fruit a big crop will result.

Plum trees are loaded with fruit, and peach trees are showing up a fairly good crop except in some open fields, where the frost got to them. Grapes, gooseberries and currents are looking fine while pears are showing the finest prospect in years.

Want to Prohibit Kissing.

The Milwaukee Physicians' Association will prepare a bill for the next Wisconsin Legislature intended to stop the practice of kissing and stamping the habit as a blot on civilization and a menace to health and decency. The action was decided on at a meeting, at which a dozen or more papers were read on the subject. A substitute for the practice offered was that of rubbing noses or foreheads, this being held more decent by the physicians.

Mrs. J. Craig Hunter Dead.

A sudden and very sad death was that of Mrs. J. Craig Hunter, of Filmore, who passed away at the Bellefonte hospital at 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning, last. She had been in failing health since about the middle of March. Just two weeks before her death she was removed to the Bellefonte hospital. It was realized that her condition was serious, but by none was it believed that the end was so near at hand. A few minutes after the attending physicians had left her bedside on Tuesday morning, at which time she appeared to be resting comfortably, she was seized with a sinking spell and quickly passed away. So unlooked for was her death that it was a shock to her wide circle of friends in Buffalo Run valley and other places. Funeral services will be held today at 2 o'clock from the late residence at Filmore, Rev. W. K. Harnish officiating. Interment will be made in the Myers cemetery.

Before her marriage to Mr. Hunter, who is a brother of Robert H. and J. Dorsey Hunter, of Bellefonte, the deceased was Miss Mary A. Wise, one of seven daughters of Anthony Wise and the first of the group to die. She was born September 29, 1865, in Michigan, removing to Centre County when quite young. Endowed with a beautiful disposition, and being devoted to her home, she was a good wife and loving mother. Aside from finding her happiest hours in home life, she seemed to derive the greatest pleasure from helping and comforting others and for her many fine, womanly qualities she was dearly beloved and admired by all who came to know her intimately. She was an active and consistent member of the Presbyterian church and a member of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of that denomination. Surviving are her aged father, her husband, two children, Florence, aged 14 and Rachel, aged 9, and these sisters: Mrs. John Garner, Mrs. William Spotts, State College; Mrs. Philip Resides, of Buffalo Run; Mrs. John Roan and Mrs. Smith, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Thomas Boyd, of Camden, N. J.

Mrs. Jamima Fye Dead,

Jamima, relict of David Fye, died on Sunday morning at one o'clock at the home of her son-in-law, J. C. Struble, near Pine Grove Mills, after a month's illness, following a stroke of paralysis. She was the oldest lady in that section of the county. She was a daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Bloom and was born at the Old Fort July 7, 1823. She was married September 14, 1843, to David Fye and spent all her life on the old Fye homestead. But one sister survives, Mrs. Jefferson Gates, of Curwensville. The surviving children are Henry, of Tyrone; Adam, of Denver, Colorado; Mrs. Kate Roan, of Pittsburg; Mrs. B. F. Homan and Mrs. Andrew Struble, of State College; Mrs. J. C. Struble and also Mrs. G. Y. Meek, of Tyrone.

J. B. Shank Dead.

J. B. Shank, who for a number of years farmed the Shugert farm, at Pleasant Gap station, died at his late home last Friday night, his death being due to cancer of the stomach. Some time ago he was removed to the Bellefonte hospital for an operation. There it was revealed that little or nothing could be done to improve his condition and he accordingly returned to his home, where he gradually became weaker until death relieved him from his sufferings. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, interment being made in the Union cemetery at Pleasant Gap. The services were conducted by Rev. D. J. Frum, of Pleasant Gap. Deceased was aged 64 years and 2 months. He is survived by a widow and eight children.
